NT bachelor's Cleo bid fails to fire

DANIEL BOURCHIER

April 23rd, 2009

TOP End fire Brent Rowley's dream of becoming Australia's top bachelor was dashed last night.

The strapping Territorian, who also works as a surf lifesaver, missed out of being named the 2009 Cleo Bachelor of the Year at a gala in Sydney.

The gong went to rocker and former Video Hits host Axle Whitehead.

While Rowley didn't win the competition, he sure had fun trying, partying with some of the country's hottest young celebrities and identities at a lavish bash on the rooftop of the Swiss Grand Hotel in Bondi.

The hype of Australia's biggest bachelor competition didn't faze the laid-back Territorian, who spoke to the Northern Territory News just minutes before he ran the gauntlet of the red carpet.

"It hasn't been that exciting," he said. "I think everyone's been waiting for the show to happen."

Rowley almost had the makings of an interstate modelling career when Clinique came knocking.

"I don't think they realised I was based in Darwin," he said. "When I said they would need to get airfares, they didn't call me back."

The Tahs footballer said while it had been fun, he is ready to head back to Darwin.
